VOL. 39 No. 100

EDITORIAL COMMENT

French newspaper has actually mentioned the correctness of a re-German war report

The President has taken up the coal question personally and is giving hearings to the operators. He is determined to give relief to the people by making reasonable prices for coal.

A call to laboring men to "play our part in the war manfully" with unstinted loyalty to these United States, was issued in a statement on "Labor Day, 1917" by John P. White, international president of the United Mine Workers of America.

Wheat is now hovering around $2 a bushel, with the distillery market permanently closed, is rapidly approaching $1 a bushel. Another drop Saturday brought the price to $1.12, olders of old corn stand to lose out half of its recent value.

That the unprecedentedly high price of corn was not due to abnormal holding of supplies by farmers is the belief of the United States Department of Agriculture, based on reports received from correspondents in Kentucky, Illinois, Ohio, Iowa and Missouri.

A Kansas City woman has "turned her husband for marrying her" to escape the draft, registering same day as a married man with dependent wife. She has been granted a divorce and the husband shipped over to the army. This call attention to the fact that married men are divorced thereby become eligible to service as single men. It shows young husbands to be good.

Among those who will fight against many are the sons of more than fifty members of the congress of United States. The list includes Watson, of Indiana, and Earl, of Colorado, and Representatives Champ Clark, Gordon, Taylor, Kitchin and Shallenberger, the latter of Nebraska. Some of boys have German names, but American patriots.

The divorce case of Wood F. Axon, of Louisville, against Mrs. Jessie Axon, of Owensboro, Judge R. Slack, who on last Saturday granted Mrs. Axon an absolute divorce, allowed her alimony in the sum of $20,000. Mrs. Axon was awarded $30,000. The court also appointed the attorneys for Mrs. Axon, W. P. Sandridge, of Owensboro, and Huston Quin, of Louisville, for their services. They were paid $5,000.

The former czar at the last moment, a newspaper, begged to be allowed to reside in the Crimea, but was refused. As the train started, the soldiers shouted derisively, "the former ruler of Russia." The prisoners remain in the Crimea, but the impression grows that they will be Siberia. At Tsarskoe Selo, the palace is being overhauled. The place is occupied by Nicholas and his family. It is said that at the old imperial palaces at Tsarskoe Selo, there are 25,000 servants, many of whom have lost their livelihood through the success of the revolution.

To a personal disagreement about M. Thompson, head of the League, over a criticism of an investigation, Secretary Daniels issued an order severing all official and courteous relations between the Navy Department and the League. This works a great blow upon thousands of patriotic men and women all over the country who have been contributing their money and patriotic services to the great work. Secretary Daniels doubtless soon see his mistake and find some other way to punish Thompson for his apparent disloyalty. The order will affect a number of men in this city and such will be the case in hundreds of

MAKING THE
NEW ARMYList of 49 Who Have Not Claimed Exemption In
First 300.

EXEM. BOARD IN SESSION

Man Who Doesn't Claim Exemption Will Await His Regular Turn.

The local exemption board has been hard at work with the claims of exemption filed by many of those who were examined for service in the draft army. Of the first 300 called, some 250 claimed exemption with the local board. These claims will be passed on by the board and from these first 300 will be obtained Christian county's quota for the army if possible. Out of the 300 the 49 listed beneath did not claim exemption with the local board, but many of these will no doubt do so on grounds of occupation with the district board which meets at Dawson Springs in the near future. The way the exemptions will be passed on is as follows:

The first man drawn, if he claims exemption, files exemption affidavits setting forth his reasons or claims. The board passes on these and if they think he has just ground for exemption he is discharged and the claim of the second man is brought up. Whenever they come to a man who does not claim exemption he is automatically passed on as accepted for the army. In this way every man will be treated fairly and squarely. It was thought by some that those who claimed no exemption would be taken first, but this is not the case. Every man must come in turn and those whose claim for exemption is not good will have to serve along with those who made no claim.

The following are those of the 49 of the first 300 whose names are being forwarded to the district board as claiming no exemption.

Raymond Everett McGraw, Dan T. Owen, Willie Taylor, Walter Bell, Martin Snorton, William Leavell, Israel S. Kamefsky, Ewell Poole, Ernest Stacker, Walter Jones, Marion Kendrick, Ernest Cravens, Willard Q. Coklow, Thomas Wm. Griffin, Roger B. Allensworth, Otho E. White, Wm. Andrew Anderson, W. BIGGEST SHOW
OF SEASON"The Girl Philippa", to Be Seen at the Princess
Thursday and Friday.

Manager Stockley has secured some big special attractions for this week, including "The Girl Philippa," for Thursday and Friday, which ran a week at the Rialto in New York and surpassed any other picture ever put on by $2,000. Crowds actually broke down doors to get in. During the week 80,000 persons saw it, paying 50 cents. This wonderful play is at the Princess Thursday and Friday.

HEARING
WEDNESDAYU. S. Commissioner Frank
Cunningham Has Big
Case Ahead.

COAL MINERS ON TRIAL

Charged With Firing Upon Soldiers of the United States.

Judge J. F. Gordon, of Madisonville, will act as special prosecutor at the preliminary hearing here tomorrow before United States Commissioner Frank Cunningham of the men arrested in Webster county for firing upon soldiers guarding the Black Diamond mines, near Clay, and who were brought here last Wednesday night. Luke Teague, of Madisonville, will represent the prisoners. Mr. Teague is the regularly employed attorney for the miners' union in this part of the state.

Already it is evident that the hearing will have to be held elsewhere than in Commissioner Cunningham's office as is usually done. This will be on account of the crowd expected in attendance. There are ten defendants to begin with, and a large number of witnesses have been summoned for each side. In addition, it is expected that many interested persons, especially from the coal field sections, will be in attendance. It is therefore probable that the hearing will be held in the circuit court room so as to accommodate everybody.

KERN DIES IN

He was city solicitor of Indianapolis 1897-1901; special United States district attorney 1893-1894; democratic candidate for governor in 1900 and 1904; democratic candidate for vice president in 1908; was nominated for United States senator by unanimous vote of the democratic state convention in 1910 and elected by the legislature Jan. 8, 1911, over Albert J. AGREE UPON
WORKING BASISRoad Commissioner Holds Important Meeting With Contractors.

TANGLE IN CONSTRUCTION

Agreement As to Roads and Test Suit To Be Brought.

The road commissioners were in session practically all day yesterday trying to straighten out a financial tangle with the contractors, Montgomery, Perkins Co., for building the various roads under construction in the county. The estimates of materials and labor needed on the various roads were nearly all too low and as a result the appropriations for some of the roads have already run out or it is evident will run out before the mileage contracted for is completed.

The contractors claim that the prices at which they are doing the work are too low and they want to either stop when the appropriations are expended, or be paid a higher rate for the excess.

State Commissioner Wiley has been in consultation and County Attorney Smith, who went to Frankfort to confer with Attorney General Morris, returned and made his report at the morning session, as a result of which at the afternoon session a resolution was adopted whereby the Montgomery-Perkins Co., agreed to complete the Dover road to station 575 and finish the work contracted for on the Princeton road at the contract price and the Commissioners agreed to consider Montgomery-Perkins Co., through with these two roads. The Dover road from station 575 on will be recovered and placed in traveling shape by the commissioners, not the contractors. The controversy as to whether or not the county can hold the contractors beyond their bond will be settled by a suit of equity filed and tried at the September term of circuit court and settled at once in the court of appeals by special arrangement with the Attorney General.

8 CAUGHT IN CALIFORNIA

Rowan, Spokane Leader, Says
Strike Will be Carried Out as Planned.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 20.—James Rowan, district secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World, and twenty-six other members of the organization were arrested at local I. W. W. headquarters Sunday afternoon by a company of Idaho national guardsmen and placed in the county jail as military prisoners. Rowan had ordered the general strike of I. W. W. labor in the Northwest to begin tomorrow.

Strike orders advising farm hands to "let the fruit rot on the ground" and calling on construction workers to lay down their tools have been issued.

"Lumber workers in the four states are already on strike," Rowan said while he was awaiting his turn to be searched and booked. "I think the strike will be spread further now and probably will affect industries in which no strike has been called. Even although the officers or employees of the organization are put in jail, arrangements have been made to handle the movement."

Another Bunch Pulled.

Long Beach, Cal., Aug. 20.—Eight members of the Industrial Workers of the World were arrested as they stepped from a Los Angeles train here Sunday by police, assisted by several national guardsmen.

HAIG GAINS A MILE FRONT

Cuts 500 Yards Into German
Holdings and Captures Fortified Farms.

Although for the most part the British and French forces in Flanders and in the vicinity of Lens are engaged in consolidating positions won last week from Crown Prince Rupprecht, the British near Ypres have made a further advance on a mile front to a depth of about 500 yards and also in the Somme region have renewed their attacks with advantage.

The Germans have been feeling out the strength of the French lines in the Vosges mountain region where, after heavy bombardments, they delivered attacks around Badonviller and north of Celles-Sur-Plaine. Their efforts, however, went to naught under the French fire from guns and rifles.

Likewise along the Aisne front and in the Verdun sector along the banks of the river Meuse a continuation of the attempts by the German crown prince to break the French lines met with the usual result—failure.

The airmen of the allies are working havoc with the German fliers and on German positions far behind the lines. In flights in the air Saturday the airmen accounted for seventeen aircraft and the British fliers seven, which were completely destroyed or forced to land inside the Teutonic lines badly battered from machine gun fire.

Yesterday's report was 30 destroyed and 21 brought down damaged.

In aerial raids behind the lines allied machines have bombed numerous towns, railway stations and cantonments, the raids extending as far as Selzaet, near the Dutch border, 18 miles from Ghent, which also received a visitation.

American aviators belonging to the Lafayette squadron took a prominent part in the French raid and performed notable execution. One of the Americans, Corporal Willis, of Boston, was missing from the squadron when it returned to its base.

German airmen also tried their hand at slipping through the British air patrol and bombing.

In this they were also successful, but the score was against them in the end, for the explosive they loosed fell on a British prisoner clearing station, killing ten Germans and inflicting further wounds on nine men of their army who had already met with hard usage at the hands of the British guns.

There has been a considerable stiffening on the front in Rumania and in Russia in the region of Vilna.

South of Grozchti, Southern Moldavia, the Russian have made a stand against the attacks of the Teutonic allies and repulsed them, and in the Slavic sector also have beaten off attempts by the invaders to take further ground. In the Lake Noroc district of the Vilna front the Germans endeavored to win Russian trenches, but their attacks broke down under the Russian barrage fire.

The present week will witness the meeting in Berlin of the main committee of the German reichstag. It is considered probable that at this session of the committee the Pope's peace proposal will be considered and that there will be a frank debate on political, military and economic questions.

Meanwhile, reports indicate a resumption of the period of unrest among the German workers. Several hundred men in the Krupp plant at Magedburg struck because of arrest of one of the leaders, while the workmen in the Essen and Dusseldorf and Rhine provinces are threatening a walkout on account of a shortage of the potato

ANNOUNCEMENT.

We are authorized to announce
JOHN W. RICHARDS
as a candidate for City Commissioner
in the non-partisan primary election
October 20, 1917.

Camp Shelby, at Hattiesburg, Miss., is reported ready to house 6,000 soldiers.

Fred M. Hackett, of Louisville, has been named by the President as food administrator for Kentucky, on the national commission.

Nearly 10,000 workmen are rushing work on the Louisville Cantonment, which will be ready at the end of this week.

After suffering for two months from a drouth which, according to an official forecast, has cut the corn crop to less than half a yield, Kansas is now threatened with a flood.

The department of justice states that it is prepared to deal swiftly and severely with activities in the northwest and elsewhere of the Industrial Workers of the World. Troops will be used if necessary to quell the strikes and labor disturbances.

Miss Mayme Wooton has been named as temporary postmaster at Madisonville to serve until a successor to her father, W. E. Wooton, is appointed. As all the informalities have been performed there is no doubt that Miss Wooton will succeed to the place and serve until the office is filled through the regular examinations.

Two army divisions instead of one,
comprising at least 38,000 men, probably will make up the first contingent of the national guard to go to France.
Although no official confirmation was obtainable, there were evidences that the complete Forty-second division, whose organization was recently announced, will be accompanied abroad by the Twenty-sixth, made up of New England guardsmen.

Formal notice was served by police Friday on leaders of the Woman's party that the so-called picketing of the white house would be tolerated no longer and that in future banner bearers will be arrested as fast as they appear. Several hours were allowed for the warning to take effect.
Then six women posted at the executive mansion gates were carried off in a patrol wagon, much to the delight of a watching crowd.

Meadorville, Ky.—Mrs. Pearl Pat-

very constipated. I had sour stomach and was so uncomfortable. I went to the doctor. He gave me some pills.
They weakened me and seemed to tear up my digestion. They would gripe me and afterwards it seemed
I was more constipated than before.
I heard of Black-Draught and decided to try it. I found it just what I needed. It was an easy laxative, and not bad to swallow. My digestion soon improved. I got well of the sour stomach, my bowels soon seemed normal, no more griping, and I would take a dose now and then, and was in good shape."

I cannot say too much for Black-
Draught for it is the finest laxative
one can use."
Thedford's Black-Draught has for many years been found of great value in the treatment of stomach, liver and bowel troubles. Easy to take, gentle and reliable in its action, leaving no bad after-effects, it has won the praise of thousands of people who have used it.

SALMON REAL HIGH JUMPER

Fish is Second Only to the Flea, Being Able to Leap Sixteen Feet in Vertical Direction.

While the flea holds the world's jumping record, he is so small and inconsiderable except from the standpoint of the discomfort he causes that a much more valuable discovery of science is that which gives the second honors to the salmon.

This fish, it has been demonstrated, can jump on the average 16 feet vertically. He can swim with apparent nonchalance and then suddenly spring out of the water and strike a mark 16 feet above him.
Scientists measured his leaps on the Rhine and on the Elbe rivers, where his athletic powers were put to their severest test.

The high water falls and natural barriers in these turbulent streams make it necessary that the salmon in fighting his way inward from the sea shall climb and leap ceaselessly before he penetrates to the source of the waters.

That American fish have equaled this 16-foot record is probable, although fishermen in our mountain streams have made no exact measurements. Previous to this discovery the kangaroo was popularly supposed to be second to the flea.

The Secrets of the Hohenzollerns

STARTLING EXPOSURE OF INNER LIFE OF KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE AS TOLD BY COUNT ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX

EDITORIAL NOTE.—William Lequeux, who here chronicles for his friend, Count Ernst von Helldendorf, the latter's revelations of the inner life of the imperial German court, has long been recognized throughout Europe as the possessor of its innermost secrets.

The English "Who's Who" says of him: "He has intimate knowledge of the secret service of Continental countries and is considered by the government (of Great Britain) as an authority on such matters." Another authority says: "Few people have been more closely associated with or have more of the astounding inner mechanism of Germany than he."

Lequeux probably has more sources of secret information at his command than any contemporary in civil life, and for the last six years the British Government has made valuable use of his vast store of secret information through a specially organized department with which Lequeux works as a voluntary assistant.

Count von Helldendorf became an intimate of Lequeux several years prior to the outbreak of the war; he has been living in retirement in France since August, 1914, and it was there that Lequeux received from the crown prince's late personal adjutant permission to make public these revelations of the inner life of the Hohenzollerns—that the democracies of the world might know the real, but heretofore hidden, personalities of the two dominant members of the autocracy they are now arrayed against.

The Plot Against Princess Louisa

THE TRUTH of the plot which caused the downfall of the unfortunate and much-maligned imperial Princess Louisa, Antoinette Marie, archduchess of Austria and wife of Friedrich-August, now the reigning king of Saxony, has never yet been revealed.

I, of course, knew the charming imperial highness, the Crown Princess Louisa of Saxony, as she often came on visits to the kaiserin, but I had never spoken much with her until at Easter, 1902, the emperor went to visit Dresden. He took with him, among other people, one of his untitled boon companions, Judicial Councillor Lohlein, a stout, flabby-faced hanger-on, who at the time possessed great influence over him.

Louisa was the most popular woman in Saxony, and deservedly so, for hers had been a love match.

After her marriage to the Saxon crown prince the kaiser, in one of his whimsical moods, became greatly attached to her because of her frankness, her love of outdoor life, and her high educational attainments, hence we often had her visiting at Potsdam or at the Berlin Schloss. She was known to be one of the few feminine royalties in whom the kaiser took the slightest interest.

At the grand ball of Easter I found myself chatting with Louisa, who, I recollect, wore a most charming and artistic gown of sea-green chiffon, décolleté, of course, with pink carnations in her hair and a few diamonds upon her corsage, as well as the Order of St. Elizabeth and her magnificent rope of matched pearls, which went twice round her neck and reached to her knees—a historic set which had once belonged to Marie Antoinette.

The Story of the Crown Prince told. As we stood chatting in a corner of the room, watching the scene of unusual brilliancy because of the kaiser's presence, the princess turned to me: "Well, a curious thing happened here about a month ago," she said. "I was—" At that moment the emperor, in the uniform of the Second regiment of Saxon Grenadiers, of which he was chief, and wearing the Order of Crancellin of the House of Saxony, strode up and, standing before us, exclaimed:

"Well, Louisa? What is the very interesting topic of conversation, eh?" Her imperial highness hesitated, as though endeavoring to avoid an explanation, but next second she waved her face and quickly said:

"Well, recently Friedrich-August and myself have moved into rooms in the older wing of the palace—rooms that have not been occupied for nearly forty years. They are old-world, charming, and remind me constantly of Augustus the Strong and the times in which he lived. Just about a month ago the king and queen of Roumania were paying us a visit. We were at dinner, and while we were all laughing and talking, for 'Carmen Sylva' had been telling us one of her stories, we heard a great clatter of horses' hoofs and the heavy rumble of wheels, just as though a stage coach was crossing the small courtyard. All of us listened, and in the silence we heard it receding quite distinctly. I at once sent my lady-in-waiting to ascertain who had arrived or departed, four-wheeled coaches being quite unusual nowadays. It seemed just as though the coach had driven out of the palace gate. The message brought back from the guard-room was that no carriage had entered or left. I told this to those around the table, and the queen of Roumania, who had taken much interest in omens and folk-lore, seated opposite me, seemed much impressed, and even perturbed."

"Then the noise you heard must have been an uncanny one, eh?" asked the emperor, deeply interested. "Quite. Two of the women at the table declared that it must have been thunder, and then the conversation proceeded. I, however, confess to your majesty that I was very much puzzled, and the more so because only two nights ago, while we sat at dinner, Friedrich-August and myself on family, we heard exactly the same sounds again!" "Really?" laughed the emperor. "Quite uncanny. I hope, here in Dresden, you are not believing in spooks, as London society believes in them." "Not at all," said the princess earnestly. "I don't believe in omens. But, curiously enough, the king told me yesterday that his two old aunts, who formerly lived in our wing of the palace, had sometimes heard the clatter of horses' hoofs, the jingle of harness, the grinding of brakes, and the rumbling of heavy carriage wheels." "I'll!" grunted the emperor. "I've heard that same story before, Louisa. The departing coach means trouble to the reigning family." "That is exactly what the king said to me only last evening," answered Louisa frankly. "Does it mean trouble to me, I wonder?" "Certainly not," I declared. "Your imperial highness need not worry for one moment over such things. Nobody nowadays regards such phenomena as presage of evil. There is no doubt some perfectly natural explanation of the sounds. Every old palace, castle and even private house, has its traditions."

been an uncanny one, eh?" asked the emperor, deeply interested.

"Quite. Two of the women at the table declared that it must have been thunder, and then the conversation proceeded. I, however, confess to your majesty that I was very much puzzled, and the more so because only two nights ago, while we sat at dinner, Friedrich-August and myself on family, we heard exactly the same sounds again!" But, curiously enough, the king told me yesterday that his two old aunts, who formerly lived in our wing of the palace, had sometimes heard the clatter of horses' hoofs, the jingle of harness, the grinding of brakes, and the rumbling of heavy carriage wheels."

"Certainly not," I declared. "Your imperial highness need not worry for one moment over such things. Nobody nowadays regards such phenomena as presage of evil. There is no doubt some perfectly natural explanation of the sounds. Every old palace, castle and even private house, has its traditions."

The Kaiser's Merry Mood.

Then the emperor, after acknowledging the salute of Baron Georg von Metzsch, controller of the royal household—a tall, thin, crafty-eyed man, with hair tinged with gray, and wearing a dark blue uniform and many decorations—changed the topic of conversation.

The kaiser was in particularly merry mood that night. He had gone to Dresden against his inclination, for he had long ago arranged an Easter review on the Tempelhofen Feld, but the visit was, I knew, for the purpose of consultation in secret with the king of Saxony.

Several times I wondered upon what his majesty of Saxony had stumbled. That morning the emperor and king had been closeted alone together for fully three hours, and the outcome of the secret conference seemed to have put the all-highest into a most excellent mood.

The Saxon crown prince and his wife were at that time a most devoted couple, though all of us knew that the modern ideas Louisa had brought to Dresden from the Hapsburg court had much shocked old King George and his consort. The Saxon court was unused to a pretty woman with buoyant spirits rejoicing in life with a capital "L."

According to the court whisperings, trouble had started a few days after marriage, when the king, having given his daughter-in-law a tiam of diamonds, a royal heirloom, with strict injunctions to wear them just as they were—a style of the seventeenth century—he one evening at the opera saw her wearing the stones re-set in that style known as art nouveau. The king became furious, and ordered them to be set again in their original settings, whereupon Louisa coolly returned the present.

Such was the commencement of the old king's ill-feeling toward her. The state ball that night was certainly a brilliant one for such a small court, and next day we all returned to Potsdam. Louisa, in a depressed mood, for while dancing with Count von Castell-Rudenhause of the Prussian Guard her lovely rope of pearls had suddenly parted as though cut by a knife.

A Mysterious Absence.

Before we left Dresden, however, I met the crown princess in one of the corridors. It was nine o'clock in the morning. She wore her riding-habit, having just come in from her morning canter.

"Well, count!" she laughed. "So you are leaving us unexpectedly! I shall be coming to pay another visit to Potsdam soon. The emperor invited me last night. An revoir!"

Her imperial highness paid her promised visit to the emperor at the Neues Palais in July.

At the time of her arrival the emperor had left suddenly and gone away to Huhertusstock. When anything unusual upset him he always went there. I overheard him the day before his departure shouting to Lohlein as I passed along one of the corridors. The judicial councillor seemed to be trying to pacify him, but apparently entirely without avail.

"You are as sly as all the rest!" I heard the emperor declare in that shrill, high-pitched tone which always denotes his anger. "I'll hear none of it—no excuses. I want no fawning, no Jew-juggling."

The next I heard was that the kaiser had left for that lonely retreat to which he went when he wished to be alone in those periods of crazy impetuosity which periodically seized him,

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Venezue Nadon,
par Moret-sur-Loing,
Seine-et-Marne,
February 10th, 1917.

My dear Lequeux:

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles describing my life as an official at the imperial court at Potsdam, and the two or three small errors you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scandals and wily intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Louisa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in these articles.

The revelations which I have made, and which you have recited here, are but a tithe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shall be pleased to furnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince in, happily, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civilization glaringly revealed, I feel, in my retirement, no compunction in exposing all I know concerning the secrets of the kaiser and his son.

With most cordial greetings from

Your sincere friend,

(Signed) ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF.

and further, that he had taken with him his crafty cory, Lohlein.

During that mysterious absence—when the tinseled world of Potsdam seemed at peace—the good-looking Saxon crown princess arrived.

I was on duty on the railway platform to bow over her hand and to welcome her.

"Ah! Count von Helldendorf! Well, did I not say that I should not be very long before I returned to Potsdam, eh?" she exclaimed. Then with a merry laugh: "Do you remember those clattering hoofs and my broken rope of pearls? Nothing has happened yet."

An Angry Emperor.

Three days later an incident occurred which caused me a good deal of thought, and, truth to tell, mystified me considerably.

That somewhat indiscreet journal, the Militar Wochenblatt, had published a statement to the effect that Friedrich-August of Saxony and the handsome Louisa had had a violent quarrel, a fact which caused a great deal of gossip throughout court circles.

Old Von Donanstauff, who at that time was master of the ceremonies at the emperor's court, bustled himself by spreading strange scandals regarding the Crown Princess Louisa. Therefore, in the circumstances, it struck me as strange that her highness should have been invited to the puritanical and hypocritical circle at Potsdam.

That afternoon, soon after the guard had been changed, I chanced to be writing in my room, which overlooked the big central courtyard, when I heard the guard suddenly turn out in great commotion, by which I knew that his majesty had suddenly returned from Huhertusstock.

Ten minutes later my telephone rang, and, passing the sentries, I went by order to his majesty's study, that chamber of plots and secrets, hung with its faded green silk damask, its furniture covered with the same material, and its net curtains at the windows threaded with ribbons of the same shade.

The moment I entered the emperor's countenance showed me that he was very angry. Lohlein had returned with him, and stood watching the emperor as the latter impatiently paced the room.

I saluted, awaiting orders in silence, but so preoccupied was his majesty that he did not notice my presence, but continued his outburst of furious wrath. "Only see what Von Hohenbroch has reported!" he cried. "I am being made a laughing-stock—and you know it, Lohlein! It has been said of us that a woman, a whim, or a word will today raise any person to high rank in our empire! That black-guard, Harden, has actually dared to write it in his journal. Well, we shall see. That woman—she shall—"

Suddenly he realized that I was present, and hesitated. Next second, both his tone and his manner changed. "Helldendorf—I—I wish you to go to Dresden and take a private letter. It will be ready in half an hour. Say nothing to anyone concerning your departure, but report to me here at four o'clock."

A Secret Mission to the Saxon Court. As commanded, I reported, but the kaiser was with the empress, who, in one of her private apartments, was holding petit cercle, the Princess Louisa being present. Indeed, as I entered that semi-circular salon the kaiser was standing astride before Louisa's chair, laughing gaily with her. He could alter his moods just as he changed his three hundred odd uniforms.

There was something mysterious in the wind—that I felt absolutely convinced. The atmosphere of that faded green upstairs room was always one of confidential conversations, intimate conferences and secret plots—plots, as has since been proved—against the peace of the world.

The emperor, noticing that I had entered the imperial presence, came forward, and I followed him back into the softly-carpeted corridor. Then he took from the inner pocket of his tunic an envelope of what you in England call

"court" size—thin-lined, as are all envelopes used by the emperor for his private correspondence. I saw it had been sealed in black by his own hand. Then, as he handed it to me, he said:

"Go to Dresden as quickly as possible and obtain a reply to this."

I clicked my heels together, and, saluting, left upon my secret mission to the Saxon court.

The letter was addressed to Baron Georg von Metzsch at Dresden.

Next day, when I presented it to the tall, thin controller of the household, I saw that its contents greatly puzzled him.

He wrote a reply, and as imperial messenger, I returned at once to Potsdam, handing it to the emperor as he strode alone from the shell salon, through which he was passing after dinner.

He took it from my hand without a word, tore open the envelope, read its contents, and then smiled contentedly, after which I went to old Von Donanstauff's room, and smoked a good cigar in his company.

The Crown Princess Calls.

Next day we were all back at the Berlin Schloss. During the morning his majesty inspected the Berlin garrison in the Tempelhofen Feld, and the Princess Louisa rode with him. That same afternoon, while I was busy writing in the long room allotted to me in the Berlin Schloss, her imperial highness, to my surprise, entered, closing the door quietly after her.

"Count von Helldendorf, you have been on a secret mission to that spy, Von Metzsch, in Dresden, have you not?"

I rose, bowed, and without replying courteously offered her a chair.

"Why do you not admit it?" she asked quickly.

"Princess, if the emperor gives me orders to preserve secrecy, then it is my duty to obey," I said.

"I know," she answered, and then I realized how upset and nervous she seemed. "But Von Metzsch hates me, and has put about all sorts of scandalous reports concerning me. Ah! count," she sighed, "you do not know how very unhappy I am—how I am surrounded by enemies!"

"I much regret to hear that," I said. "But your imperial highness has also many friends, of whom I hope I may be permitted to number myself."

"Ah! It is extremely good of you to say that—very good. If you really are my friend, then you can help me. You are in a position to watch and discover what is in progress—the reason the emperor exchanges those constant confidences with Von Metzsch, the man who twisted my husband around his little finger, and who has, with my lady-of-the-bedchamber, Frau von Fritsch, already poisoned his mind against me. Ah! you have no idea how much I have suffered!"

She seemed on the verge of a nervous crisis, for I saw that in her fine eyes stood the light of unshed tears, and I confess I was much puzzled, for I had certainly believed, up to that moment, that she was on excellent terms with her husband.

"But surely his highness, the crown prince of Saxony, does not believe any of those wicked reports?" I said.

"Ah! Then you have heard. Of course, you have. Von Metzsch has taken good care to tell the whole world know the lies that he and the Countess Pauline Starhemberg have concocted between them. It is cruel! It is wicked!"

"No, no. Calm yourself, princess!" I urged sympathetically. "I am at least your friend, and will act as such, should occasion arise."

"Ah!" she exclaimed in a low voice. "I fear I shall require the assistance of a friend very soon. Do you recollect my broken pearls?"

And a few moments later she left the room.

"You Lie!"

Through all that day and the next I wondered what underhand work could be in progress. I pitied the good-looking, unconventional imperial princess who, because of her somewhat hoydenish high spirits, had aroused the storm of anger and jealousy in the Saxon court. But the Hapsburgs had ever been so unfortunate in their loves.

On the day before the crown princess' visit to the Berlin court was due to end, at about six o'clock in the evening, I passed the sentries and ascended to the emperor's study with some papers I had been going through regarding the reorganization of the Stettin garrison. I was one of the very few persons ever admitted to that wing of the palace.

As I approached the door, treading noiselessly upon the soft carpet, I heard voices raised excitedly, the door being slightly ajar.

Naturally I halted. In my position I was able to hear a great deal of palace intrigue, but never had I listened to a conversation that held me more breathless than at that moment.

"Woman," cried the emperor, "do you, then, openly defy my authority?"

"What that crafty sycophant, Von Metzsch, has told you is, I repeat, a foul and abominable lie," was the reply.

And I knew that the unfortunate princess was defending her reputation, which her enemies at the court of Saxony had torn to shreds.

"No woman ever admits the truth, of course," sneered the emperor. "I consider you a disgrace to the Dresden court."

"So this is the manner in which you openly insult your guests!" was the princess' retort. "You, who believe yourself the idol of your people, now exhibit yourself in your true light as the traducer of a defenseless woman!"

"How dare you utter those words to me!" cried the all-highest one, in fury.

"I dare defend myself—even though you may be emperor," replied Louisa, in a cold, hard tone of defiance. "I repeat that your allegations are untrue, and that you have no right to make them. Surely you can see that my enemies, headed by the king of Saxony, are all conspiring to effect my downfall. I know it! I have written proof of it!"

"Bosh! You say that because you know that the statements are true!" "You lie!" she cried fiercely. "They are not true. You cannot prove them."

"Very well," answered the emperor in that tone of cold determination that I knew too well. "I will prove the charges to my entire satisfaction."

Words That the Kaiser Would Never Forgive. I was startled at the manner in which the princess had dared to call the emperor a liar. Surely nobody had ever done so before.

I drew a long breath, for as I crept away unseen I recollected the kaiser's unrelenting vindictiveness.

Poor princess! I knew that the red talons of the Hohenzollern eagle would sooner or later be laid heavily upon her.

She left Berlin two hours later, but half an hour before her departure I found a hurriedly scribbled note upon my table explaining that she had had "a few unpleasant words with the emperor," and that she was leaving for Dresden a day earlier than had been arranged.

A fortnight passed. Twice Baron von Metzsch came to Potsdam, and was on each occasion closely closeted with the emperor, as well as having frequent consultations with Judicial Councillor Lohlein. I had strong suspicion that the conspiracy against the lively daughter of the Hapsburgs was still in progress, for I felt assured that the kaiser would never forgive those words of defiance from a woman's lips, and that his vengeance, slow and subtle, would assuredly fall upon her.

I did not know at the time—not, indeed, until fully three years later—how the actions of Von Metzsch, who was a creature of the kaiser, had from the first been instigated by the all-highest, for, from the very day of the princess' marriage, had, notwithstanding his apparent graciousness toward her, determined that a Hapsburg should never become queen of Saxony.

For that reason, namely, because the emperor in his overweening vanity believed himself to be the heaven-sent ruler of the destinies of the German empire, was much opposed to an Austrian princess as a potential queen at Dresden, and had set himself the task to ruin the poor woman's life and love and to arouse such a scandal concerning her that she could not remain in Saxony with every finger pointing at her in opprobrium and scorn.

Decipher a Message for the Kaiser.

A fresh light, however, was thrown upon what I afterward realized to be an astounding conspiracy by the receipt of a cipher message late one November night at Potsdam. I was at work alone with the emperor in the pale green upstairs room, reading and placing before him a number of state documents to which he scrawled his scribbly signature, when the telegram was brought.

"Decipher that, Helldendorf," he commanded, and went on with the work of reading and signing the documents, while I sat down with the red leather-covered code book, and presently found that the message, which was from Dresden, read:

"Frau von Fritsch today had an interview with Otton, the French tutor of the crown prince, and he told me unfortunately the latter refuses to admit any affection for Louisa. Giron angrily declared his intention to leave Dresden, because of Von Fritsch's suggestion. This course, I saw, would be unfortunate for our plans, therefore I urge the king to induce Louisa to request him to remain. She has done so, but to no avail, and Giron left for Brussels tonight. May I be permitted to come to discuss with your majesty a further elaboration of the plans?—Von Metzsch."

The emperor read the secret message twice.

"We go to Erfurt tomorrow, do we not?" he said. "Telegraph in cipher to Von Metzsch to meet us there tomorrow evening at seven. And destroy that message," he added.

I obeyed his orders, and afterward continued to deal with the state papers, much enlightened by the news transmitted by the emperor's creature.

I confess that I felt the deepest sympathy for the helpless victim. At the Schloss, high above the old-world town of Erfurt, Von Metzsch had a long conference with the emperor, but I was unable to overhear any word of it. All I know is that the controller of the Saxon household left Erfurt for Dresden by special train at midnight.

Poor, defenseless Louisa! Oh, my dear Lequeux, to whom the princess a few months afterward asked for advice, know well how sterling, how womanly and honest she was; how she was one victim of many of the unscrupulous intrigues by which the arrogant war lord of Germany has until the present managed to retain his throne.

The Crisis.

Well, I watched the course of events; watched eagerly and daily. Twice I had received letters from her imperial highness, short notes in her firm, bold handwriting.

From Von Metzsch came several cipher messages to the emperor after we had returned to Potsdam, but Zorn von Bulach, my colleague, deciphered all of them, and, as he was not my friend, I did not inquire as to their purport. I knew, however, that matters in Dresden were fast approaching a crisis, and that the unfortunate Hapsburg princess could no longer sustain the cruel and unjust pressure being put upon her undoing. That a hundred of Germany's spies and agents provocateurs were busy I realized from the many messages by telephone and telegraph passing between Berlin and Dresden, and I felt certain that the ruin of poor Princess Louisa was nigh.

A significant message came to Potsdam late one December night—a message which, when I deciphered it and handed it to the emperor, caused him to smile.

Three days later, on December 9, a further cipher telegram came from Von Metzsch, in Dresden, which read: "Louisa has learned of the Sonnenstein project, and has left Salzburg for Zurich, her brother accompanying."—Von Metzsch."

Sonnenstein! That was a private lunatic asylum!

In a few moments the kaiser had summoned, by his private telephone, Kochler, then chief of the Berlin secret police, and given orders that the princess be watched in Switzerland. Half an hour later three police agents were on their way to Zurich to follow the poor, distracted woman, even beyond the confines of the empire.

She was, no doubt, in deadly fear of being sent to a living tomb, so that her mouth should be closed forever. And seeing herself surrounded by enemies and spies on every hand—for even her brother Leopold, with whom she had traveled to Switzerland, now refused to assist her—she adopted the only method of further escape that at the moment presented itself.

Alone and without anyone to advise her, she, as you know, took a desperate resolve, one almost fraught with disastrous consequences.

The iron had indeed entered the poor princess' soul.

Note by William Lequeux.

The denouement of this base intrigue will be best related in her imperial highness' own words. In one of her letters, which I have on my table as I write, she says:

"I saw before me in those never-to-be-forgotten days all the horrors of a 'Maison de Santé.' What could I do? I was friendless in a strange hotel. Even Leopold seemed disinclined to be further troubled by a runaway sister. I knew Frau von Fritsch had accused me falsely of having secret love affairs, and that the emperor had directed the whole plot which was to culminate in my confinement in an asylum. Suddenly a solution occurred to me. I remembered Monsieur Giron, who had already suffered greatly through his friendship with me. It he joined me, then my flight from Dresden would be considered as an elopement, and I should escape a living death in a madhouse! Monsieur Giron was at that moment my only friend, and it was for that reason that I telegraphed to him at Brussels. Well, he joined me, and by doing so completed the emperor's triumph." Man Killed at Providence Was Driver of "Whisky Car," Says Report.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 20.—The official report of Capt. Ellerbe Carter, of Company B, First Kentucky, on the shooting which occurred at Providence last Saturday, in which Karl Cates was fatally wounded by a soldier was made public at brigade headquarters at Camp Stanley Thursday. It disclosed the fact that the auto, in which Cates was riding at the time, contained 310 half-pints of whisky, 12 quarts of gin and 12 bottles of beer. Cates had been suspected of bootlegging among the negro miners. The report shows that the sentries had been placed on the outskirts of the town especially to watch for the "whisky car," and that when the command to halt was given the driver put on more speed. Cates declared in the hospital just before he died that he had not heard the command to halt.

All official connection between the Navy and the Navy League was severed by order of Secretary Daniels as a result of the action of the league headquarters in charging that investigation of the recent fatal explosion at Mare Island navyyard was being blocked by influence of labor.

Almost Ready.

All soldiers' barracks, officers' quarters and lavatories at Camp Taylor will be completed next Saturday and turned over to the Government. The work will have taken exactly nine weeks and the camp will be the first of the sixteen great training camps to be completed. Some stables, hospital buildings and recreation buildings are yet to be completed. Government quartermasters already are buying huge quantities of supplies for the soldiers who will be stationed at the camp.

Cheaper Coal.

Definite action to reduce prices of coal to the consumer and to bring about better distribution will be taken early this week. This was learned following a conference between President Wilson and the Federal Trade Commission, at which estimates of coal production costs and recommendations for dealing with the distribution were considered. Officials who have followed the situation closely believe the President will direct the requisitioning of all coal mined.

COMPLICATIONS CAUSE DEATH

Two Operations in Effort to Relieve Victim Proved of no Avail.

Miss Donie Trainum died about 11 o'clock Sunday night at the home of her brother-in-law, Mr. P. C. Richardson, East Ninth street, of complications. About three weeks ago she underwent an operation for appendicitis. Her condition did not materially improve and on last Friday another operation was performed, but she continued to grow worse and passed away as above stated. Miss Trainum had been a sufferer from stomach trouble and other complications for several months. The deceased was a daughter of the late Richard Trainum and was 61 years old. She was a member of the Christian church and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew her. She is survived by three brothers, Richard Trainum, of New Orleans; Walter Trainum, of California; and Wm. H. Trainum, of this city; also three sisters, Mrs. Hallie Churchill, of Redlands, Cal., and Mrs. Mollie Carroll and Mrs. P. C. Richardson, both of this city. Funeral services will be held at the Richardson residence at 10:30 o'clock this morning, conducted by Rev. Minor, of the Christian church, and the interment will take place in Rivers Cemetery.

Ice Cream Supper.

An ice cream supper will be given at Pleasant Grove school house next Friday night, August 24, for the benefit of the school. Everybody invited.

Auto War Tax.

The automobile section of the War Tax Bill was adopted by the Senate virtually as written by the Finance Committee. It provides for a graduated Federal tax upon automobile and motorcycle owners instead of the House levy of 5 per cent. upon manufacturers' sales. Between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 in revenue could be secured by the Senate's tax against $68,000,000 under the House bill.

Hurled Into Sunshine.

"I was in Petrograd during the first appraisal of the new assets," writes Isaac F. Marcossian in Everybody's. "Like prisoners long immured in the dark and suddenly hurled into the sunshine, the people blinked in the strange light of their unfamiliar emancipation. The one-time balliwet of the czars was a study in scarlet—animate like an American city during a national convention. Its great thoroughfare—the Nevski Prospekt—once the Street of Sacrifice, was now the Highway of Happiness. Never was there such glad reunion. It was like the meeting of lost tribes after much wandering in the wilderness. Exiles streamed in from Siberia under the general amnesty; Jews came forth from their long restraint, for creed lines were down; delegations of troops flocked from the front. Equality was the password that loosed every tongue."

Destruction of Heath Hens.

Current Items of Interest contains an account of the increase of the heath hen on its reservation on Martha's Vineyard, in which it was stated that some increase in numbers had been occasioned by a destructive fire. Two visits to the reservation by E. R. Forbush, state ornithologist of Massachusetts, revealed that the decrease had been very great, only 120 birds being noted on the island, where 800 or more had been the preceding year.

Re-Mint American Gold Coins.

American gold coins are being re-minted in Mexico at a profit to the Mexican government. Many taxes, federal and state, are paid in American gold, which by decree is accepted as the equivalent of $1.00 Mexican money. The gold in each $10 American piece, however, is sufficient to make two "half-dollos" or Mexican $10 pieces.

ROAST WILHELM

Responsibility of Kaiser's Message to U. S. May Cause Reichstag Probe.

Copenhagen, Aug. 20.—Publication of Emperor William's telegram to President Wilson in the memoirs of ex-Ambassador Gerard and the lame and belated attempt at explanation made by the semi-official Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, calls forth criticism in the German press of what is termed the German emperor's irresponsible conduct of the foreign affairs of the empire.

The various Berlin newspapers comment on the system which permits a sovereign to pass upon such a proposal from a neutral power and to draft an important state document without consultation with a responsible minister or even without the necessary record subsequently being made.

Authorized announcement has been made of the marriage of Mr. Bowling S. Wood and Miss Annie Laurie Chiles two months or more ago. The wedding took place June 6, in Nashville, Tenn., Rev. T. C. Ragsdale officiating, and for romantic reasons the wedding was kept a secret until August 17. The bride is a beautiful and attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Chiles and the groom is a son of Mrs. M. H. Wood. They are preparing to move to a farm near the city in a few weeks.

OBSTRUCTING DRAFT LAW

Charge Preferred Against Crittenden County Man—Other Federal Cases.

Elijah Franklin, of Crittenden county, was brought before U. S. Commissioner Cunningham Saturday, charged with obstructing the draft law. Defendant waived examination and was released under $500 bond to answer to the federal court at Paducah.

Frank R. Dunning, of Caldwell County, was also held over under bond of $100 after he waived examination on the charge of not registering at the proper time.

When John Henry Kimbrows, a Hopkins county negro, applied for marriage license here Saturday the clerk was suspicious that he was not of age and asked for his army draft certificate as proof. This developed that the negro never registered. He was arrested and taken before United States Commissioner Cunningham and bound over to federal court and was taken to Paducah Sunday. But after being bound over he was allowed to go out to the girl's home and the marriage took place.

CALLING MEN OUT OF TURN

Draft Boards Warned Against Illegal Methods—All Registrants on Equality.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 20.—Local Draft Boards, which have been "following the line of least resistance," by going down the list and certifying names only of those who claim no exemptions, were called down by Provost Marshal General Crowder Friday in a telegram to Governor Stanley requesting him to notify all local boards that the boards are not appointed to call volunteers, but to select men in the order of their liability to service.

They are all equally liable for service according to the order in which they were drawn, he admonishes the boards, and no man must be called out of his turn. The boards may, however, select the first 33 per cent to be sent to the cantonments early in September from those whose cases are settled; but great care is enjoined upon the boards not to include men so far down the list that it is improbable they will be included in the county's quota when all exemptions claims have been disposed of.

In another telegram General Crowder reiterates the positive stand that members of boards may not resign except under circumstances fully stated, which makes it imperative that they be relieved.

Youth Hurt In Quarrel

Walter Stamper, 19, is alleged to have struck Marion Francis, 22, in the back of the head with a large stone at Lafayette Saturday night. Francis' condition has since been critical. Stamper was arrested and placed in the Lafayette jail, but fearing possible violence against him the Sheriff brought him here at midnight. Francis is the son of John Francis, a farmer, of Stewart County, Tenn. Stamper also is a farmer.

Following the order of Secretary Daniels Saturday refusing to let the Navy have anything to do with the Navy League, on account of personal unpleasantness between him and Robt. M. To Secretary Navy League, Hopkinsville, Ky.

The Sec. of the Navy cannot legally prohibit the men of the service from accepting patriotic gifts from patriotic people, and we ask you to continue your work as usual.

WATCH FOR AIR RAIDS.

American Headquarters In France, Aug. 20.—The increasing airplane activity on the western front is the sole topic of conversation among the officers and men in the camp.

No fear is felt, because the Americans are confident that the French aerial defenses and planes are more than able to cope with the situation. However, there is much speculation regarding the possibility of an early attack on the camp by Germans. Many believed it would happen before this. Others now consider the allies' offensive is so big that it will be impossible for the Germans to spare planes to bomb the American camp.

"It's good to keep a weather eye skyward these days," said a veteran sergeant as he trudged along the road, returning to camp from practice. That is the view of all soldiers here. During maneuvers some soldier is apt to be scanning the clouds and searching for German scout planes.

The feeling on this subject is one of sporting interest. No alarm is evident anywhere.

FARM HOMES FOR AUSTRALIA

Vast Area in Australia May Be Opened Up to Settlement by British Soldier After War.

Plans to throw open 3,000,000 square miles of white Australia to population by ex-servicemen when war is over is a plan that is now being taken up enthusiastically by the leaders not only in Australia, but throughout the British empire. This colonization movement is under the auspices of the British Immigration League of Australia. Henry C. Armstrong, a member of the league, who has been in this country, tells interestingly of the aims, and of the vast country that will be opened up as a place where the soldiers can find home comfort and peaceful prosperity as a reward for industry after the fight is done.

The general plan of the league is to have the government of the Australian states provide areas of land adequate to the accommodation of desirable settlers from the Australian and British forces who may wish to make their homes in that commonwealth, provision being made especially for ex-service settlers and their dependents. The money requisite for the proper settlement by Australian sailors and soldiers is to be raised by special taxation or loans. It provides that the general scheme of provision and betterment should be under rigid government control and financed from the consolidated revenue. As whatever amount thus raised by special taxation will be inadequate to the expense and recurring cost of settling on equal conditions a large number of British ex-service men, any balance required is to be supplied by loans from the imperial government.

WHY CORN IS REALLY KING

Used in Old Sense as Meaning Grain of All Kinds, It May Determine Result of World War.

In no age of our world history has the old expression "Corn is King" more forcibly illustrated the most potent factor in human existence than today. In the United States we commonly associate with the word corn one class of grain, called by the rest of the world maize. Corn has been a term through the world, both in agriculture and commerce, for grains of practically all description, such as wheat, barley, rye, oats and even rice, and the corn laws of England were made to govern transactions and the shipment of all grains both whole and ground. It is the practically unanimous opinion of diplomats and the best informed writers that the present world war will be won, "not by the last bullet but by the last crust."

Thus we may truly say that corn is the "king" to whom we must freely yield the most autocratic powers.—Exchange.

HER VIEW OF CO-EDUCATION

Little Girl Loses Interest in Mother's College When She Finds Gardener Is Only Man There.

A prominent college woman of Los Angeles, Cal., tells the following incident which solves the question of co-education—that is, solves it from her small daughter's naive and as yet undirected point of view. She says:

"Not long ago my husband and myself were motoring through the northern part of the state accompanied by our children, Beatrice who is seven and Buddy, four. At the University of Berkeley the little ones were being well entertained by their father's fraternity brothers when suddenly, in the midst of the attentions showered upon her, Beatrice hopefully suggested, 'Mother, do you suppose we could visit my college, too?' We have always spoken of Berkeley as Buddy's college and of Mills as Beatrice's. Needless to say when I consented to her petition, her eyes sparkled and I knew she was looking forward with great, fanciful expectation to the pleasure in store at her own college."

"As we were being shown about the attractive campus at Mills, I noticed that something was slowly but certainly dispelling my daughter's vivid interest in the place. At a loss to comprehend her conspicuous change of attitude, I asked her if she didn't like 'her college.'"

"'I—I'm sorry, mother,' hesitating a bit lest she needlessly seem to overrule my selection of the place, 'this—this isn't my college any more.' Then screwing her brow up into a quizzical, little knot she added by way of explanation, 'I couldn't marry the gardener—could I? And he is the only man here.'"

REASONING POWER IN BEASTS

Writer Cites Incidents to Prove That Animals Are Capable of Reflecting and Observing.

Without speaking of trained animals, accomplishing acts foreign to their nature, I could fill a hundred pages with observations demonstrating that animals are capable of observing, of reflecting, and of acting in accord with the result of their observations. C. Saint Saens writes in Revue Scientifique, Paris.

Let a few examples suffice:

In a small town near Paris a female dog had her foot broken, and since there was no veterinary in the place she was taken to a doctor, who performed the necessary operation. Some time afterward, another dog having met with the same accident, the first patient conducted him to a physician. Shall I tell of my own dog, Dalila, going to hunt a lump of sugar for her mother and afterward going to seek another for herself? Are these acts which could have been foreseen?

As for suicide, it exists among animals. I have been a witness of that of a sparrow, captured, caged and unable to accustom itself to captivity. It committed suicide under difficult conditions, with a courage and a strength of will of which few men would be capable.

MAKING WATCH TELL TRUTH

Traveler Hits Upon Plan to Make It Unnecessary to Turn His Timepiece Forward or Back.

The average commercial traveler who journeys about the United States has to keep a close watch on his timepiece to see that it is telling the truth. There is an hour's difference in time when you enter and leave some cities, and it's an important matter that you do not forget to set your watch back or forward an hour, according to which way you are traveling. If you overlook it you may miss a train.

An express official who travels almost all the time and is so busy that he sometimes forgets to change his watch at Detroit, Mich., for instance, or at Dodge City, Ia., has frequently had an experience of this kind. Sometimes he has arrived an hour ahead of time, or perhaps an hour after a train has left, giving him time enough for reflection.

Recently he conceived the idea of making his watch tell all four different times—Eastern, Central, Mountain and Pacific. He went to a jeweler and had extra hour hands put on his timepiece—each of a different color, so that he can recognize it at a glance, on the face of his watch. For instance, the ordinary hour-hand, set at Eastern time, is silver; a blue hand, set an hour back, represents Central time; a red hand, for Mountain time, is set two hours back, and a green hour-hand three hours back, represents Pacific time.

You can do this to your own watch. The jeweler will make a set of hands of these colors and alter your watch for a consideration of a few dollars.

EACH NEW SWORD IS BLESSED

Japanese, Past Masters in Art of Making Weapons, Offer Them When Completed to Goddess.

That the Japanese are past masters in the art of swordmaking is proved by the splendid weapons, equal to those of Toledo and Damascus, which they turn out. The actual method of swordmaking in Japan is jealously guarded, an extraordinary feature of the industry being the religious ceremony which accompanies every process of their manufacture. The walls of every swordmaking shop in Japan will be found to be covered with allegorical representations of the swordmakers and the chief goddess of the Shintos.

Even the final processes of polishing and sharpening are characterized by certain religious ceremonies, and finally the weapons are offered, one by one, to the sword god to be blessed, says London Tit-Bits. This ceremony consists in placing the swords in front of the goddess of the Shintos on the wall, with an offering of sake, rice and sweets, after which prayer scrolls are read and blessing upon the work is invoked.

For Indigestion.

For a severe attack of indigestion there is nothing better than hot water and soda. A cupful of hot water with a teaspoonful of soda in it should be taken as hot as can be swallowed. The remedy can be made even more effective by adding a few drops of essence of peppermint to the hot water and soda. This makes a very powerful "soda mint tablet." Indeed, if the indigestion is accompanied by slight nausea, aromatic spirits of ammonia often gives relief. Put half a teaspoonful in a third of a glass of water. This can be repeated at the end of half an hour if necessary. Sometimes the dose is more efficacious if given in half a cupful of hot water, instead of the smaller amount of cold.—Exchange.

Charcoal Made in Dominica.

Charcoal is much used in Dominica, probably because there is plenty of cheap labor to burn it. Most of it is made far up the rivers and brought down then in heavy native dugout canoes. The charcoal is first packed in little bark baskets about the size of a strawberry basket. Several hundred of these are then loaded upon the boat and tied down with some sort of fiber; a man takes his place in the stern and the craft starts on a long journey at the rate of perhaps a mile an hour. To an American it looks as though it must have taken a week to pile up the load, while a breath of wind might knock it all in the water, but the cargoes always seem to arrive safely in port.

Teaching for Future Endeavor.

If the teacher knew what field of endeavor each pupil would seek in later life, he would be greatly helped in making school plans. In the case of boys he can rarely know, for the employments of men are many and unlike and unforeseen circumstances often determine what their vocation is to be. In the case of girls, however, the difficulty is not so great, for of a hundred girls more than eighty will become homemakers; they constitute so large a group with a common life business that special studies and methods adapted to their needs may fairly be required of all.—Youth's Companion.

"Of course not. It is the nature of things for them to be continually running pedestrians down."

"That's the beauty of it."

ABANDON FOOD PREJUDICES

Don't Be Finicky

Be willing to try new foods. Certain plentiful and nourishing foods widely used and enjoyed in one section are practically unknown in other sections of the country. Learn to know ALL the good things; not a few only.

People too easily get into food ruts---insist on eating only the food they are used to and refuse to give a fair trial to others. This causes undue demand for certain staples, with resulting scarcity or high prices when crops are short. At the same time other valuable foods may be relatively cheap and available. A striking instance of this is failure fully to appreciate rice--a valuable source of starch--when potatoes are scarce and high. Another example is refusal in certain sections to use anything but wheat as a breadstuff when corn--a valuable cereal widely used elsewhere as a breadstuff---is plentiful and relatively cheap.

Cook Food Properly

Learn how to cook all kinds of staple foods and to serve them in a variety of ways. Simple dishes well prepared are better than expensive foods badly cooked.

Many persons are prejudiced against certain good foods because, when first tried, the foods were improperly cooked or prepared.

Remove from your vocabulary "don't like" or "can't eat."

Most individual prejudices against widely popular foods either imaginary or baseless.

Try to like every simple food; give it a fair trial.

Napoleon's Last Words.
When Napoleon lay dying on the island of St. Helena he kept murmuring in his delirium, "Hail to the Army," and these are his last recorded words, whilst his unfortunate successor, Napoleon III, asked the doctor, whilst also under the influence of some mental delusion: "Were you at Sedan?"

Allan, on his second birthday, was told by his mother that he was two years old. That same day his mother weighed him, and as she lifted him off the scale she said: "You weigh just thirty pounds." That evening, when the little boy's father came home he said: "Well, Allan, how old are you?" Allan hesitated a few seconds and then replied, "Two years and thirty pounds."

THE THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION OF THE NEW YORK WORLD IN 1917

Practically a Daily at the Price of a Weekly. No other Newspaper in the world gives so much at so low a price.

The value and need of a newspaper in the household was never greater than at the present time. The great war in Europe is now half way into its third year, and, whether peace be at hand or yet far off, it and the events to follow it are sure to be of absorbing interest for many a month to come.

These are world-shaking affairs, in which the United States, willing or unwilling, is compelled to take a part. No intelligent person can ignore such issues.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is $1.00 per year, and this pays for 158 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the HOPKINSVILLE KENTUCKIAN (Tri-weekly,) together for one year for $2.65.

WHY KISSES GIVE A THRILL

It is When Chemical Elements in a Man and a Woman Blend Properly That They Are Really Mated.

An eminent psychopath has likened a kiss to the stroking of a cat, and says that the longer you kiss the same woman the less the thrill you get in return.

Love is an electro-chemical action, and he who says the same effect that is derived from a kiss can be obtained from the stroking of a cat is a theorist and is taking into consideration only the electro part of the action. It is likely that the learned psychopath is not a man from the great school of experience, or that he has never been fortunate enough to come in contact with the human magnet that did not repel him.

Compare two human beings, male and female, with two large storage batteries highly charged.

The action to which the batteries are subjected wears them out as time goes on. They work harmoniously, and so it is with a man and a woman. So long as she is magnetic she draws the man to her, and the same thrill is there, but once she begins to repel, then the magnet ceases to perform its functions and the thrill is gone.

Who would be satisfied to stroke the back of a pretty cat to bring about the thrill they have experienced when brought in contact with the magnet that attracted them?

When the chemical elements in a man and a woman blend properly that is when they are mated; the kiss never loses its thrill.—Chicago Herald.

NOTED PEOPLE LEFT-HANDED

Many Famous Painters and Writers Have Been Ambidextrous—Hobby of Late Charles Reade.

Julius Caesar and the historian Tacitus are said to have been left-handed, as well as the philosopher Schopenhauer, the late Queen Victoria and former Speaker Cannon.

As to the lower animals skilled observers disagree. Gould and Brinton believe that they use the two sides of their bodies differently. Bardeleben, however, says that when we ascend the scale to the monkey type we find the gibbon and the orang-utan right-handed, and the gorilla and the chimpanzee left-handed, which seems to divide the honors pretty evenly.

Electrically Heated Mine Ambulance.

A useful form of ambulance is being introduced in one of the mines of one of the Western states. Formerly it was usual, when an accident occurred in the mine, to place the injured man on a stretcher, transporting him to the surface in a mine car. As the distance to be traveled might be from three to four miles and against the high velocity intake current of air, the injured men often became chilled and this retarded recovery. The difficulty has now been overcome by the use of a specially designed ambulance, which is electrically heated and lighted, and is equipped with a cot suspended on springs to obviate any jarring. The ambulance can accommodate both the patient and an attendant, and is equipped with receptacles on either side in which first-aid supplies, hot-water bottles, blankets and other necessities can be stored.

Nothing to Speak Of.

"Have you taken anything for your cold?" asked the doctor of a long, lank, hungry-looking man, who came to him complaining of being "all run down," his appearance verifying his words.

"Well, I ain't bin takin' much o' anythin', doctor—that is, nothin' to speak of. I tuk a couple o' bottles o' 'Hakham's Bitters' a while back an' a couple o' 'Quacken's Invigorator,' with a couple o' boxes o' 'Curein's Pills,' and a lot o' root bitters, an' quinine my old woman made up. I've got a porous plaster on my back and a liver pad on, an' I'm wearin' a 'lectric belt, an' takin' quinine an' from four times a day, with a dose or two of salts every other day; 'ceptin' for that, I ain't takin' nothin'!"

Every Scrap of Value.

Every scrap of waste fabric, rope or paper is of value. Clean white cotton rags are the most valuable, but every species of rag, no matter how old or soiled, can be utilized. Even our old black stockings return to us in the form of roofing paper and are highly valued by the manufacturers of this material. And there is going to be a tremendous demand for roofing paper after the war, because of the wholesale destruction of buildings for which it has been responsible. Woolen rags that are not good enough for remanufacture are used for the same purpose.—Exchange.

Queer Hiding Places.

There died a while ago an aged man in Shropshire, England, who had lived in poverty but was believed to be rich. Relatives found $50,000 in banknotes of large denominations sewed inside the lining of a tattered hat the dead man had worn for years. In San Stefano, Italy, a dead miser was found to have concealed money in large bank bills in the soles and heels of his shoes.

Another Fallacy Shattered.

Contact with young people is supposed to be rejuvenating! Indeed, this contact is the only good thing many see in that absorbing and in every other way desirable profession of teaching. Was ever so false an idea! How could so obvious a fallacy get the popular ear? Think how little aware of passing years we should be, were it not for the young! Their very presence proclaims our greater years. They themselves seem to have conspired together to help us to a suitable awareness. Every possible aid is offered, and offered in the kindest spirit of courtesy. One is helped into wraps, relieved of carrying loads or opening doors, guided up and down steps, deposited in easy chairs, and generally treated as fragile. It is all delightful; but the force of suggestion as exerted by so many vigorous young minds will sooner or later have its effect. We may resist for a time; ultimately, however, we shall take ourselves at the rating of the community in which we live. I have seen my friends capitulate one by one, accept the verdict of the majority, and settle down into the accepted properties of middle-age.—Atlantic Monthly.

Mules Not Treacherous.

Mules are charged with treachery only by those who have never given an intensive study to their habits. Mules defend themselves from that which they do not understand. They become accustomed to being harnessed while colts and it is traditional that a mule never kicks while being saddled or harnessed. The best knows what that means. But it is also traditional that a mule sleeps with one eye open. He is always alert to what is going on about him. It is never safe to stoop down suddenly to pick something up behind or at the side of a mule. That is to him an unexplained action. He cannot fathom the intent back of it and he generally lets fly with one or both heels by way of protest.

Digestibility of Cheese.

By experiments on the digestibility of cheese it has been shown that much depends on the special physical characters of the food. All fat cheeses are said to be dissolved and digested with great rapidity, because the molecules of casein—the nitrogenous part of the cheese—are separated only by the fat, and so the gastric juice can attack a large surface of the cheese at one time. Whether the cheese be hard or soft does not appear to influence digestion, and there is no connection between the digestibility and the percentage of water present in the cheese.

TORPEDO FANS AMERICAN LINER

Only a Few Inches Saves it
---U-Boat Dives as Yankee Gunners Fire.

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 20.—An American passenger steamship which arrived from England today was attacked by a submarine off the Irish coast on her last outward voyage and escaped being torpedoed by inches, her officers said. As the torpedo approached, it seemed that the liner was doomed. Her speed, however, saved her, the torpedo missing the rudder, the officers said, by not more than a foot.

The submarine submerged, but soon the periscope reappeared, the U-boat commander evidently anxious to see whether his torpedo had found its mark. The submarine then quickly submerged, navy gunners firing at it.

TIME IS THE TEST.

The Testimony of Hopkinsville
People Stands the Test.

The test of time is what tells the tale. The public soon finds out when misrepresentations are made, and merit alone will stand the test of time.

Hopkinsville people appreciate merit, and many months ago local citizens publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. They do so still. Would a citizen make the statement which follows unless convinced that the article was just as represented? Below is testimony such as the sufferer from kidney ills is looking for.

Mrs. W. M. Kelly, 524 N. Main St., Hopkinsville, gave the following statement on February 8, 1912: "I suffered from weak kidneys and had sharp pains across the small of my back and in my side. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills so highly endorsed, I got some at the Anderson-Fowler Drug Co. I was greatly benefited. Since then I have used several more boxes with great relief."

On January 16, 1917, Mrs. Kelly said: "I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally to keep my kidneys in good working order. I am glad to again recommend them."

ARMY COMMANDERS.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Here are thumb-nail sketches of the men who will train and command the fighting forces of Kentucky:

Maj. Gen. Harry C. Hale, who will command Camp Taylor, was born in and appointed to West Point from Illinois, and was graduated in 1883. He was made Second Lieutenant of Infantry. He then did frontier duty, and served as aide to Maj. Gen. Wesley Merritt before and during the Manila campaign of 1898. He was a member of the General Staff corps from 1903 to 1906, being detailed for several months at the Naval War College at Newport. He was again ordered to the Philippines, where he served as Adjutant General of the Department of Mindanao. He was made Lieutenant Colonel in 1911 and Colonel in 1915. He recently served at Tientsin, China, and was made Brigadier General during this summer.

Maj. Gen. William H. Sage, who will be in command at Hattiesburg, was born in New York and appointed to West Point from that State. Graduated in 1882 and made Second Lieutenant of Infantry. He served on frontier duty until 1892. He served a year as professor of military science and tactics at Central University of Kentucky. He served a year as aide-de-camp to Gen. Overshiner in the Philippines and was awarded a medal of honor for distinguished gallantry in action at Zapote River. He was made Major in 1906 and assigned to duty at the War College, and afterward in the Adjutant General's department. He was raised to the rank of Brigadier General during the present summer.

Petty, of Fort Worth, Texas, was elected as a teacher in the high school, the position formerly held by Miss Ferguson; Miss Ethel Golladay was elected as a teacher, in the place of Miss Evie Quarles, who was recently elected, but declined.

Several changes were made in the janitors of the various schools. Geo. George Quarles, colored janitor formerly at Belmont, was transferred to the high school; George Gray, colored, was changed from high school to Virginia street, and Leslie Anderson remains at the West Side school, William Washington at the colored high school and Allen Thompson at the Jackson street colored school.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Judge Bush's Charge to The Calloway Grand Jury.

(Murray Ledger.)

The regular August term of the Calloway Circuit Court was convened here Monday morning by Judge C. H. Bush, of Hopkinsville. After selecting a grand jury Judge Bush delivered his charge, which was one of the most vigorous ever heard in this city.

He discussed many phases of the criminal law, both crimes and misdemeanors, and urged the importance of rigid investigation of all infractions of law, laying particular stress upon the fact that the courts are powerless to enforce the law without the instrumentality of the grand jury.

In speaking of the various crimes, he called special attention to perjury and false swearing, stating that it was marvelous how many persons lightly regard the obligation of an oath, and insisted upon the grand jury indicting in every case where there is evidence tending to establish such a charge, and declared that all such persons deserved to be in the penitentiary.

He also spoke vigorously against the habit of carrying concealed weapons, stating that it was one of the most fruitful sources of crime.

He spoke of trusts and combinations to fix prohibitive prices upon necessities, such as coal, tending to place them out of the reach of the poor, and declared in positive terms against such proceedings, and called upon the grand jury to inquire into it.

He told the grand jury that it was no time for idlers and vagrants, that it was the business of man to be employed, and in harmony with both human and divine law, that the grand jury should stand for this great principle by helping to enforce the law against vagrancy.

The Judge called attention to the law against child desertion, and pronounced it one of the best laws on the statute books, and said a man who would wilfully desert his child deserved the extreme penalty of the law.

Judge Bush spoke at some length in regard to the rioting in Murray of January 10, 1917, in connection with the Martin cases. He said no good citizen, standing for law and order and for the preservation of our institutions and security of our homes, can afford to countenance such lawlessness, and that it was his duty to declare. That he didn't do it from any personal feeling, but as an officer and citizen of this state. He said a former grand jury had taken notice of the disgraceful affair and returned a few indictments, and others should follow, and he appealed to the jury to do its duty in the premises.

"A FEW THINGS ABOUT SILOS"

A silo is a sure sign of thrift.
Only the best farmers build them.
They save 40 per cent. of a corn crop.
Corn is now worth $9.00 per barrel.
The stalks that produce a barrel of corn today are worth $3.60 if put into a silo.

When you allow these stalks to dry up on the hill for fodder you lose about $3.00 for every barrel of corn you produce.

You can't afford this awful waste.
If you raise a $3.00 barrel corn crop you throw away $900.00 by not converting it the stalk insilage.

It behooves every man in every business to save everything in times like these. The opposite course is not only foolish but wicked, for the world's food and feed supply is wholly inadequate.

We offer first class silos with plain lugs as follows:

10 ft. diameter, 24 ft. high	$145.00
12 ft. " 30 ft. high	205.00

We offer 5 per cent. off for cash.
